The Challenge
Organizations today face a wide range of risks originating in different areas of their business, related to strategy, credit, corporate and regulatory compliance, interest rates, liquidity, market prices, operations (errors, fraud, and external events), and reputation, among others. While risks are spread out across an organization and often interrelate, it is difficult to get a holistic view of risk necessary to manage it efficiently and effectively.

The problem is further compounded with the introduction of new products and services, mergers and acquisitions, business process changes, and new and intensifying sources of fraud. In many organizations, risks are documented haphazardly in spreadsheets and documents without consistent use of a common approach, methodology, or rating scale. In addition, accountability for risk is tenuous because risks are not assigned to named managers and business units. This undermines accountability and increases the likelihood that a significant risk event will occur.
