

Today's Siloed Security Is Not Working

Despite all the security investments organizations have made, it's still too difficult to understand to what degree security incidents impact business continuity, intellectual property, and damage to their reputation, among other things. The inability to do so is what RSA calls the "gap of grief."

Close The Gap With Business-Driven Security

Business-driven security delivers visibility that is comprehensive, faster time to insight, an understanding of business context around a given incident, faster, more efficient response, and a better ability to link security strategy and activity with business priorities.

